To the Public.

AN unusual sensibility has been excited in the minds of our countrymen by the copper plate engraving of the Declaration of Independence recently published, accompanied by fac similes of the signatures of those illustrious patriots who framed the document by which our independence was announced to the world. We feel, while we dwell on those signatures, as if we were ushered into the immediate presence of characters so exalted, and we seem for a time to participate in all the emotion which they felt on the approach of so awful a crisis—Hostile armies, desolate fields, towns and cities in conflagration—carnage and death in its most frightful forms apeared in prophetic vision on the one hand, and more than all, the complicated horrors, ignominy and slavery were presented for their acceptance on the other; they deliberated, they paused, they trembled, and at last solemnly appealing to the God of battles, they resolved that the United States were and ought to be free, sovereign and independent. These illustrious patriots, with five solitary exceptions, have now mingled with the common mould—they survive only in their country's glory and in the recollection of a grateful people. But it would be consoling to the present generation, separated as they now are from those patriots, by the intervention of the tomb, to become more intimately acquainted with their revolutionary benefactors. We love to dwell on the features of such men, snatched by the pencil from the oblivion of the grave, and emulate the prominent feats of their biography. Impressed with these ideas, the subscriber proposes, if suitable encouragement is given, to publish the lives of those patriots in numbers, until the whole is completed. The work will be executed in a style not inferior to any European productions, and the portraits by masters of acknowledged merit. The biography will be written by Paul Allen, esq. whose intimacy with the several signers, whose familiarity with the privations and hardships they had to undergo, and whose well known talents will be sufficient to ensure the patronage of an enlightened people. In the execution of this work, all that the publisher dares to promise is, that he will endeavor to deserve the confidence of his countrymen, and that no exertion on his part will be wanting to prevent an abuse of that confidence. He ventures to solicit the assistance of those gentlemen in possession of authentic facts and anecdotes, by communicating the intelligence that will serve to illustrate the characters and to enrich the biography of those founders of the American Republic.—Those who are in possession of their portraits would enlarge the obligation by a loan of the same.

A prospectus with the terms will be given in a few days.

REVIEW

Of Madame de Stael's considerations of the principal events of the French Revolution, 2 vols. 8vo.

No III.

In the delight which the federation of the 14th of July communicated to the people, and their decreasing jealousy of Louis, that prince might have ascertained the policy, which would reconcile his own authority with the liberties of his country.—By ratifying all laws which seemed promotive of the national prosperity, and by rejecting all which he disapproved, he would have convinced all parties of his sincerity and his patriotism. Unhappily, however, instead of adopting this manly course which Necker recommended, he was persuaded by the aristocrats that all his acts since the 6th of October, 1789, were the acts of a captive, which, under a favorable reverse, might be fairly annulled. The king, therefore, endured, with a facility quite appalling to his unsuspecting minister, the encroachments of faction on his power; and, as it followed from the new system, that no concession was too great for to-day, since to-morrow it might be revoked, proceeded to sanction every extravagance of the assembly. By thus scattering his dominion among the mob, he animated his enemies and dispirited his friends: the mob contemned him when nothing was left to be given, and his friends ceased to support what he seemed unwilling to retain. Necker, disapproving the thoughtless self-desertion of the king, and unacquainted with its secret object, once more resigned. But as he, who, like the Persian prince, believes himself to possess two souls, will certainly be guided by the evil one, Louis prosecuted this system, until he became inextricably entangled in its perplexities. The same policy which thus impaired his integrity, inflicted a mortal wound on his power.

To invigorate the wasting monarchy, satisfactory overtures were made to Mirabeau. He advised the removal of the king to Compeigne, where he might be protected by M. de Bouilles' regiments, and whither the constitutional assembly might be called. But while Mirabeau was thus preparing an expiation of his faults, by giving a free and orderly government to France, he unfortunately died. "During his illness," says Madame de Stael, "an immense crowd collected daily and hourly before his door: that crowd made not the smallest noise, from dread of disturbing him: it was frequently renewed in the course of the twenty-four hours, and persons of different classes all behaved with equal respect. A young man having having heard it said that on introducing fresh blood into the veins of a dying man, a recovery might be effected, came forward and offered to save the life of Mirabeau at the expense of his own. We cannot, without emotion, see homage rendered to talent; so much does it differ from that which is lavished on power. Mirabeau knew that his death was approaching. At that moment, far from sinking under affliction, he had a feeling of pride; the cannon were firing for a public ceremony; he called out, "I hear already the funeral of Achilles." * * * * He received no consolation from religion; he was struck by death, in the fullness of the interests of this world, and when he thought himself near the object at which his ambition pointed. There is in the destiny of almost all men, when we take the trouble of examining it, a manifest proof of a moral and religious object, of which they themselves are not always aware, and towards which they advance unconsciously. * * * * The day after his death, no member of the constituent assembly cast an unmoved eye towards the place where Mirabeau was accustomed to sit. The great oak had fallen: the rest were no longer to be distinguished. I cannot but blame myself for expressing such regret for a character little entitled to esteem; but talent like his is so rare; and it is unfortunately, so likely that one will see nothing equal to it in the course of one's life, that it is impossible to restrain a sigh, when death closes his brazen gates on a man, lately so eloquent, so animated; in short so strongly and so firmly in possession of life." Vol. 1, p. 244.

If the death of this orator created a poignant sorrow in all parties, the monarch beheld in it the annihilation of his only hope. The perils and dependance which now surrounded him, prompted his flight towards Montmedy. This was followed by his arrest at Varennes, his imprisonment in the palace of the Thuilleries, and his acceptance of the revised constitution. The legislative assembly, in which the jacobins predominated, weary, according to our authoress, "even of the patience of Louis XVI, determined to present to him two decrees, to which his conscience and his safety would not allow him to affix his sanction. By the first they sentenced to transportation, every priest who had refused the constitutional oath, if he were denounced by twenty active citizens, that is, citizens who paid taxes; and by the second they called to Paris a legion of Marsellois, whom they knew to be determined to act the part of conspirators against the crown." Vol. 1, p. 291.

The concessive system which Louis had adopted, he now sacrificed to the honorable feeling that incited him to reject these infamous laws. When his veto became known, 20,000 ruffians armed with pikes and lances, marched to the Thuilleries, where Louis displayed the fortitude of a martyr, and the spirit of a hero. His sister Elizabeth magnanimously encouraged the error of the mob, which mistook her for Maria Antoinette. "The queen herself," says Madame de Stael "ought to have been recognized by the ardor with which she pressed her children to her breast." Vol. 1, p. 292. The account given by our authoress of the king's compulsory assistance in celebrating the anniversary of July 14th, is followed by a review of the duke of Brunswick's celebrated manifesto; the insurrection of the 10th of August, and the massacres attending it; the abolition of royalty, and, (for our summary must now contract itself) the execution of Louis. To the description of this dreadful act of jacobinical despotism, is added a parallel between the conduct of that monarch, and that of the English Charles I. The chapter containing it we regard as the most curious in the book, since it developes the inadequacy of experience to furnish principles of action, suited to a revolutionary era.—Scarcely a point exists in the situation and character of the two kings, in which strong contrast is not perceivable; yet they both proceeded, tho' by opposite roads, to the same cruel altar, where they were immolated, that liberty might spring from their blood, like the flower from the blood of the fabled Hyacynthus. It is, indeed, improbable that the history of the world can exhibit a revolution so little affected by the personal character of the monarch as that of France. The mildness and benificence of Louis XVI. instead of removing an obstacle, as some have imagined, to the progress of reform, ought more naturally to have produced acquiescence in his government. When in the vicissitudes of society a signal event occurs nothing is more common than for aspiring curiosity to investigate its origin, and to shew what would have prevented it; but a different result in the next coincidence of similar circumstances often displays the ineptitude of general reasonings, and the operation of particular causes, which experience had never intimated, nor ingenuity surmised.

Madame de Stael's observations on the war between England and the republic, discover her usual wisdom and liberality. But the comparison between Pitt and Fox, which they comprise, is tainted with the erroneous notion of their political sentiments that once prevailed. Because Mr. Fox was the orator of the opposition, he has been viewed as the self-denying apostle of liberty; and Mr. Pitt, because he administered the power of the state, as being unfriendly to popular rights. Yet, on occasions which afforded an unequivocal test of their principles, the India bill and the Regency bill, the consistency and abhorrence of arbitrary power manifested by Mr. Pitt, were by no means obvious in his rival. Of the talents of these illustrious men, Madame de Stael has given a far juster estimate; and, indeed, mankind seems now to admit, that they differed more in kind than degree.——After the sketch of the 14 months reign of terror, and of the Vendean insurrections. We arrive at the establishment of the directorial republic, during which Bernadotte and Bonaparte appeared on the political theatre. The character of the latter is prominent throughout the remainder of the work, and is portrayed with a freshness and skill which none other of the numerous attempts to describe him has exhibited. At the time when the treaty of Campo Formio was concluded, Bonaparte was believed to add an amiable and even poetic sensibility of character to extraordinary talents.—"It was with this sentiment at least," says Madame de Stael, "that I saw him, for the first time, at Paris. I could not find words to reply to him, when he came to me to say, that he had sought my father at Coppet, and that he regretted having passed into Switzerland without seeing him. But, when I was a little recovered from the confusion of admiration, a strongly marked sentiment of fear succeeded. Bonaparte, at that time, had no power; he was ever believed to be not a little threatened by the captious suspicions of the directory, so that the fear which he inspired, was caused by the singular effect of his person upon nearly all who approached him. I had seen men highly worthy of esteem; I had likewise seen monsters of ferocity; there was nothing in the effect which Bonaparte produced on me, that could bring back to my recollection either the one or the other. I soon perceived, in the different opportunities which I had of meeting him during his stay at Paris, that his character could not be defined by the words which we commonly use; he was neither good, nor gentle, nor violent, nor cruel, after the manner of individuals of whom we have any knowledge. Such a being had no fellow, and therefore could neither feel nor excite sympathy: he was more or less than man. His cast of character, his understanding, his language, were stamped with the impress of an unknown nature; an additional advantage for the subjugation of Frenchmen. Far from recovering my confidence by seeing Bonaparte more frequently, he constantly intimidated me more and more. I had a confused feeling, that no emotion of the heart could act upon him. He regards a human being as an action or thing, not as a fellow creature. The force of his will consists in the impossibility of disturbing the calculations of his egotism: he is an able chess player; and the human race is the opponent, to whom he proposes to give check mates. His successes depend as much on the qualities in which he is deficient as on the talents which he possesses. Neither pity, nor allurement, nor religion, nor attachment to any idea whatsoever, could turn him aside from his principal direction. * * * * Sometimes he related the political events of his life in a very interesting manner; he had even somewhat of Italian imagination in narratives which allowed of gayety; yet nothing could triumph over my invincible aversion for what I perceived in him. I felt in his soul, a cold, sharp edged sword, which froze the wound that it inflicted; I perceived in his understanding a profound irony, from which nothing great nor beautiful, not even his own glory, could escape; for he despised the nation whose suffrages he wished, and no spark of enthusiasm was mingled with his desire of astonishing the human race." Vol 1, p. 387.

The unrivalled sketch which has just been extracted, is followed by a detail of Bonaparte's successes; his departure for Egypt and return thence; his consulate, and accession to the imperial throne.

From the Washington City Gazette March 13

We extract the following concluding paragraphs from the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, on the right of the states to tax the brancues of the Bank of the United States, recently pronounced in the case of M'Culloch against the state of Maryland in the Supreme Court of the United States, In our next, we will commence the publication of the whole of this lengthy but interesting decision, copied from the National Intelligencer, and shortly take occasion to offer some remarks thereon.

"The people of all the States have created the general government; and have conferred upon it the general power of taxation. The people of all the States, and the States themselves, are represented in Congress, and by their Representatives exercise this power.—When they tax the chartered institutions of the States, they tax his constituents; and these taxes must be uniform. But when a state taxes the operations of the government of the United States, it acts upon institutions created not by their own constituents, but by people, over whom they claim no control. It acts upon the measures of a government created by others, as well as themselves, for the benefit of others in common with themselves. The difference is that which always exists, and always must exist, between the action of a whole, or a part, and the action of a part and the whole—between the laws of a government declared to be supreme, and those of a government which, when in opposition to those laws, is not supreme.

"But if the full application of this argument could be admitted, it might bring into question the right of Congress to tax the State Banks, and could not prove the right of the States to tax of the Bank of the United States.

"The court has bestowed upon this subject its most deliberate consideration. The result is a conviction that the states have no power, by taxation, or otherwise, to retard, impede, burden, or in any manner control the operations of the constitutional laws enacted by Congress to carry into execution the powers vested in the general government. This is we think, the unavoidable consequence of that supremacy, which the constitution has declared.

"We are unanimously of opinion, that the law passed by the legislature of Maryland, imposing a tax on the bank of the United States is unconstitutional, and void.

"This opinion does not deprive the states of any resources which they originally possessed. It does not extend to a tax paid by the real property of the bank, in common with the other real property within the state, nor to a tax imposed on the interest which the citizens of Maryland may hold in this institution, in common with other property of the same description throughout the state. But this is a tax on the operations of the bank, and is consequently a tax on the operation of an instrument employed by the government of the union, to carry its powers into execution. Such a tax must be unconstitutional.

"The judgment of the court of appeals of the state of Maryland, is therefore erroneous, and must be reversed; and a mandate be issued to that court, directing a judgment to be entered for the plaintiff in error."

BRILLIANT ANTICIPATION.

The following paragraph is copied from the National Inteligencer of Thursday:—

"Mellish's Map has been referred to in the late negociations with Spain. From that map it appears that the whole domain of the United States, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, is about equal to two milions two hundred and fifty-six thousand, nine hundred and fifty-five square miles; of which that part lying East of the Mississippi, and including the Floridas, is equal to nine hundred and forty-two thousand, one hundred and thirty square miles. If the whole domain were as populus as Connecticut at the last Census, (1810) it would contain a population of one hundred and thirty five millions, four hundred and seventeen thousand three hundred persons: and, if as populous as Italy now is, the number would be five hundred and one millions forty-four thousand and ten! Give but the imagination play, and there is no limit to the grandeur we may anticpate for our country. Nay, if arithmetic be true a very few brief years will find this the most powerful nation on the globe. We have only to wish that it may be as enlightened as it will be powerful."

FOREIGN NEWS.

We are indebted to our correspondent at Havre, and to a friend in this city for Paris papers to Jan. 21, twenty four days later than before received, and London papers to the 4th received by the Mary & Jane from Havre. Paris, Jan. 5.

The official bulletin published in a gazette extraordinary, of Madrid, concerning the event of the 26th of December, says that the Queen was sitting upon a bed, attended by some persons attached to her service, when she was suddenly seized by an attack of palsy. The disease, after 2 or 3 minutes seemed to disappear; but it was only to return with a severity already frightful. The exertions of the faculty which were procured with haste, were unable to avert that calamity by which Spain is afflicted.

As soon as all doubt of the death of her Majesty had ceased, the king gave permission that the Caesareen operation should be performed in order if possible to preserve the infant; but notwithstanding every care that could be taken, it lived only a short time.

Thus Ferdinand VII, at the age of 34 years, is a second time a widower; and this new loss has renewed his grief, occasioned by that of the Princess of Naples, who was also taken away in the flower of her age.

The Queen Maria Isabella Frances, was born at Lisbon the 19th of May, 1797. She was the daughter of John VI. and the Infanta Charlotte Joachim; and was therefore both the wife and niece of Ferdinand VII. The court of Spain have put on mourning for six months, the first three of which are to be observed with rigour.

London, Jan. 4.

It is understood that the consorts of all our four royal Dukes now abroad are happily advanced in pregnancy, and therefore there is the most gratifying hopes of securing the line of succession in the immediate issue of his Majesty. We hear with satisfaction, that the duke and duchess of Kent are to proceed to England previously to the duchess'e accouchment, and surely it would be a becoming deference to public opinion that they should all do so. When it is considered by what rigorous precautions the ancient practice of the realm has guarded the royal bed of England, so as to give undisputed confidence to the people in the legitimacy to the family, it is not fit that a royal duchess should bring forth a Prince that may be future sovereign of Great-Britain, in some solitary chateau of Germany.

ARMY OF EUROPE.

In a statistical survey of Europe, lately published at Vienna, it is estimated that the armed force of Europe on the Peace establishment, consists of 1,793,000 men, and on a war establishment of 3,908,000. The marine is calculated at 462 vessels of the line, 310 frigates, and 1032 vessels of lesser rank.

Paris, Jan. 21.

On the first day of the year a man, 62 years of age, cut his throat, in the canton of Zurich. His mind had been bewildered by the predictions of madame de Krudener. After having had preached to him the new approach of the last judgment, he had distributed a part of his effects, and procured a boat in order to save himself from the deluge was delayed, he had nothing to live upon, and entered the hospital at Zurich. It was there that he put an end to his existence.

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shad and herring fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very tertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaister acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles, on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Dist. of Columbia prices are given for grain: being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion, 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary outhouse, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might,) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvass backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensels and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia

September 4 GEORGE MASON.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirous of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 80 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—a part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutricious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; waggon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow.—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female. To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that they will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, esq. or

PROPOSALS

BY JOSEPH M. SANDERSON,
for publishing by subscription,
A BIOGRAPHY OF THE SIGNERS TO THE
Declaration of Independence,
ACCOMPANIED WITH PLATES;

To which will be annexed a history of the proceedings of congress during the passage of the law, and the Declaration itself, with fac-simile engravings of the signatures.

By PAUL ALLEN, Esq.

TO THE PUBLIC.

IT seems a little surprising that amongst so many subjects as have been presented for American Biography, the lives of those who have affixed their signatures to the Declaration of Independence have been overlooked or disregarded. The eyes of thousands have dwelt with rapture upon the document that announced to the world that "these United Colonies were, and of right ought to be, free, sovereign, and independent states;" while we are better acquainted with the handwriting than with the characters of many of those illustrious men who have added their signatures to that instrument. The founders of the only remaining republic on the globe, have, with a few splendid exceptions, gone to their graves, and it behoves a generous posterity, sensible of their obligations, to preserve their fame. The longer we neglect the payment of so sacred a debt, the more difficult does the payment become.—Traits of individual character are fugitive and evanescent; and if they are not snatched by the hand of the Biographic Muse, at an early season, from the cold grasp of death, will soon partake of the oblivion of the body.—It is not the object of the present attempt, to deal in that profusion of indiscriminate and unsparing panegyric, so often and so falsely dignified with the name of Biography: we wish to represent the characters as they were; they stand in need of no panegyric; and we earnestly solicit from the surviving relations and friends of those revolutionary patriots all the information that will tend to a developement of character. Man is the creature of circumstance, and we wish to show the progress of those patriots from their first resistance of colonial aggression, until they stood forth the noble and undaunted champions of their country's independence. All this can only be done by a familiar acquaintance with the lives of these men, and whoever of the surviving friends or relatives will furnish facts and circumstances in their possession to unfold and illustrate their characters, shall be entitled to a copy of the work as a recompense. It is contemplated, wherever it is practicable, further to embellish the meditated work with correct likenesses of the subjects of our biography, executed by the most eminent artists in the country. For this purpose we again solicit the assistance of their surviving relatives and friends. If they will transmit to the publisher any engraving or portrait from which a copy may be taken, the original shall be faithfully returned, and shall likewise be remunerated with a copy of the work. In the first number it is proposed to give an account of the Declaration of Independence, from the first motion that was made on the floor of congress until its final passage into a law, a period embracing much curious and secret history: finally, we promise to add to our last number the Declaration of Independence itself, with fac-simile engravings of the signatures. We have now compendiously stated the objects of our present undertaking, and we hope that it will be unnecessary to mention that no exertions on our part shall be spared.

The public are now in possession of our project, which does indeed seem to be demanded, by the avidity so recently displayed for the possession of the Declaration of Independence, since it is of very little import to become acquainted with a man's hand writing without a previous knowledge of the man. The secret history of our Declaration of Independence, the lives of those who have affixed their signatures to that instrument, accompanied by their likenesses, and finally the Declaration itself with fac-similes of the signatures, will bring into one compact view the prominent facts of that interesting crisis.

CONDITIONS.

I. The work will be published in numbers, or half volumes, of 150 pages octavo, and will be contained in ten numbers.

II. It will be printed on fine paper made expressly for the purpose, and delivered to subscribers at two dollars and fifty cents per half volume or number, payable on delivery.

☞ Subscriptions will be received at the office of the Alexandria Gazette.
